Why the Barber?
The Bootleg Hearer.
Worship, a Necessity.

THE REV. MR. PALMER, Unitarian of Lynn, reaches the front page by saying that Herbert Hoover, kissing the Bible on a carefully selected text at his inauguration, had "attempted to connect Bible idolatry with prohibition enforcement."

The good and reverend gentleman even drags into his criticism of President Hoover "an ignorant, ignorant, ignorant" about to be electrocuted for the murder of a girl.

President Hoover probably will ask, "Why drag in the barber?" And pass on.

He will thank the reverend gentleman for reminding him that, no matter what you do, you will be criticized.

To Mr. Ring Lardner's statement: "You can bootleg liquor anywhere except in the fire and the costliest; you may add that you can find bootleg liquor almost anywhere, in flying machines, prisons, automobiles, even in submarines and baby carriages. Many conveyances are used for transporting it."

Bootleggers in South Philadelphia stole a hearse from a hospital yard intending to drive their victim a respectable, mournful ride to his destination in a large coffin. To their horror, after they had stolen the hearse at night, they found in the morning that it contained the body of Catherine Mashinsky, four months old, and abandoned the hearse as "silly."

What Will Rogers calls the "five and ten prohibition law," five years in jail and $10,000 fine, went into effect yesterday in Chicago, and the first was caught in the Jones net was the Mahala, a policeman. The Chicago federal district court yesterday pronounced 100 indictments per month.

Lenin, long dead, smiling and still smiling, thanks to still smiling, lies in his "shrine" outside the Moscow Kremlin. Thousands of Communist pass, gazing in reverence at the most venerable of the corpses of their leaders.

Believing as Lenin did, that they were on earth in God, their attitude at the Lenin shrine proves that even those who try not to believe must have something to worship.

An Voltare said, "If it were not so good it would be necessary to invent one."

Impressive figures prove that the radio has come to stay with a vengeance. During '28 retail sales of radio apparatus totaled $70,877,517.

The extent to which radio has transformed human life and enlarged its possibilities is understood as little as the importance of printing was understood when Gutenberg began setting up his movable type.

Printing opened all the knowledge of the world to everybody who could read.

Radio offers the speeches, music and information of the world to everybody able to listen.

Berlin reports an agreement by which General Motors, for $20,000,000, acquires 75 per cent of Opel Motors, biggest German automobile concern.

The presence of Alfred P. Sloan Jr. in Europe makes the purchase probable. Opel has a capacity of 500 automobiles and 100 bicycles daily, and will doubtless thereafter produce Chevrolet cars.

The new immigration law will bring in more Scandinavians and Italians and diminish the number of German, Scandinavian and Irish immigrants. The Russians and the Italians will be welcome. The country needs more with every breath to move.

Cutting down the quota of German, Scandinavian and Irish is a misfortune. What would it mean to shut out such a German as Carl Schurz, such a Scandinavian as Colonel Lindbergh, such an Irishman as Gen. Phil Sheridan?

Factory workers in Russia cite past resolutions like: "Shame on Trotsky for selling the political conscience to the capitalist class."

Trotsky, kicked out of Russia and in need of money, wrote what he thought about Russia, which, without knowing it, is already turning in the direction of capitalism.

When Russian workers have known "free" a little longer they will know that freedom of speech is the first essential of real freedom. Tyranny, under a dictator or a Soviet government, forces free speech more than dynamite.

"MISERY" GIRL, HARBLED FROM AUTO, IS IDENTIFIED

JUDGE ALLEN TALKS TODAY FIN. COMM.

The Finance Commission's rebuke to Mayor Nichols for employing his father-in-law in the city sanitary division in East Boston caused two representative organizations of that district to rally to the mayor's support today and to attack the commission.

Governor Allen was urged to take steps toward riding Boston of the "faul-finding and useless" Finance Commission in resolutions adopted by the East Boston Betterment Association.

The other organization, the East Boston Improvement Association, defended the record of Frederick M. Williams, the mayor's father-in-law, and asserted that largely through his work as foreman their section was the cleanest in the city.

Both organizations pointed out that Williams was properly certified by the Civil Service Commission, and the improvement association begged the mayor to reinstate him.

The resolutions of the East Boston Betterment Association included the following: "The Finance Commission has brought charges that were a defamatory attack which could not be substantiated beyond reasonable doubt."

"The charges tend to cause the people to lose faith in appointments made by our executives and in the conduct of state and city affairs. All appointments are certified by the civil service commission."

"This association, representing one of the most thickly settled districts in Massachusetts, with a population of approximately 70,000, goes on record as strenuously condemning the picky action of the Finance Commission in investigating the record of an employee of the city who for the past ten years has given invaluable service in keeping East Boston a clean and healthful place in which to live."

GIFFY SMITH TO GIVE HARVARD TALK TODAY

Among his many callers, there was one girl from the Stanley tribe who called to pay his respects.

Frank P. Davidson, chairman of the personal workers committee and one of the proprietors of a well known jewelry establishment, came to escort the evangelist to the jewelry store. Here Davidson asked Giffy if his watch didn't need cleaning, which Giffy thought it might.

A few minutes later, Mr. Davidson returned. "Here Giffy, this little watch will help to keep you on time for the meetings while we are having your cleaned. And it is always handy to have two watches with you," he said, presenting the prayer with a beautiful gold wrist watch. CALLS CHICAGO MORE LAWFUL THAN SOUTH

Washington, March 13 (AP)—Agreeing that there is a certain amount of crime in Chicago, Representative Sabath, Democrat, Illinois, contending that there is less law violation per capita in that city and the state of Illinois than in the southern states "that have sent the leading and most notorious 'dry' advocates to Congress."

In an extension of remarks in the Congressional Record today, Sabath, a well, cited prominent figures showing that in 1928 there were ten times as many delinquencies as in 1927, as many as 100 times as many still women, five times as many fornicators, and twice the number of gallons of mash seized in Alabama, Florida, and Georgia combined than in Illinois. The one statistic, he said, has a population 20,000 under that of his state.

Sabath said he wished to emphasize "with all the vigor that I can command that the city of Chicago is as good a city as any in the United States, and that cities and nations there are as safe as a place in this country."

NEW YORK STOCKS NEW YORK CURB NEW YORK STOCK MARKET NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

MANUFACTURING UTILITIES ASSOCIATION is calling special meeting for Monday, March 23, at 2 o'clock to vote on proposal to give trustees power to borrow money for a longer period than three years.

Preference shareholders are being asked to tender for sale in the Massachusetts Utilities Associates any part of their holdings. Under proposal to tender preference shares and new debentures will be expected to accrue to the Massachusetts Utilities Associates treasury a material saving in taxes in liquidation of participating dividends on shares to be retired and in cost of financing for construction and for acquisition of new property.

Over a period of 20 years the requirements of the Associates for new money for construction and for acquisition of property will probably be at least $10,000,000 and the saving in the cost of financing through the use of the proposed debentures, should be at least one half of 1 per cent for the life of any debentures issued.

Current earnings are sufficient to cover interest, and the Associates are confident that they will be able to pay dividends on the new debentures at the rate of 6 per cent.

The closing year of the Commonwealth's regime saw born the largest public utility system in the United States. This was the result of the merger of the Consolidated Gas Company of New York and the Brooklyn Edison Company.

The new Consolidated Gas Company of New York is also the most compact public utility system in the world.

It does nearly all the gas and electric business in the boroughs of New York City, excepting Richmond, and excepting the field has been largely won. The new system is a large gas and electric system which is served by the Brooklyn Union Gas Company. Large gas and electric subsidiaries extend the company's operations through Westchester County.

Gross sales of gas in cubic feet have been growing annually from $7,434,923 in 1922 to $13,467,467 in 1928. Along with these the gas business has increased in every year except 1925, from $21,872,798 in 1922 to $59,592,928 in 1928.

The merger with Brooklyn Edison is expected to prove very beneficial, through operating economies achieved. A reduction of approximately $5,000,000 in electric lighting rates for the company's customers was announced upon approval of the merger plan.

Use of gas in artificial refrigeration has been a source of increasing revenue in recent months. Special industrial gas rates have been established. The greater use of gas in the heating field has been reported, as has also been the case with other major gas companies.

In the case of the big Boston company, for example, it was stated not long ago that no customer had ever been lost after once having had a gas test installed. These factors are expected by company management to build up and rejuvenate the gas business.

The New York Edison Company, a subsidiary, has pending a suit to do away with "sub-metering" concerns. If the suit is won, it is estimated around $10,000,000 a year would be saved. Probably the estimated saving, if the suit is won, after once having had a gas test installed. These factors are expected by company management to build up and rejuvenate the gas business.

Whisperers have been heard of an Eastern seaboard utilities system to come as a result of mergers, with Consolidated Gas as a central figure.

Per share earnings of the common stock do not appear large, because of the large capitalization as compared with earnings of other companies. The merged company began in 1928 on the 10,394,700 outstanding shares amounted to $4.52 a share as compared with $3.98 in 1927. As is frequently the case with Massachusetts utilities, rights issued to stockholders from time to time can be depended upon to increase the price of the stock market, the favorable outlook should be reflected both in 1929 earnings and in higher prices for the shares.

Wilkins First to See New Land

Herewith is presented the second instalment of Captain Wilkins' thrilling, exclusive, detailed narrative of his historic flight of discovery in the Antarctic. In this instalment, which will appear in the December, resulted in important discoveries that raised the existing geographical knowledge of the world.

In yesterday's instalment Captain Wilkins told how he and Eleton, after a perilous takeoff in their monoplane from Deception Island, winged southward over Graham Land and finally came to rest on Terra del Fuego before they began their flight. Today's instalment continues the narrative from this point and tells of the epochal discoveries made.

By CAPTAIN SIR HUBERT WILKINS

Commander of the Wilkins-Hearst Antarctic Expedition.

New York, March 13.—Looking southward we could see that Graham Land at that latitude became more and more broken, soon it was evident that an ice filled channel cut Graham Land in half. A conspicuous mountain near the end of North Graham Land we called Mr. Napier Birk after an Australian who years ago placed funds at my disposal for geographical work in the Antarctic.

The north end of South Graham Land widened and its easterly point we called Cape Northrop after the engineer who designed the famous Lockheed plane.

The mountains behind the cape we called Lockheed Mountains. It soon became evident that even South Graham Land was not a island. It ended abruptly in a steep mass of mountains which we called after Mr. T. V. Rance, who was with me on the expedition. The channel between the mountains and the next island, called Scripps Island after the Scripps of Detroit, was named Scripps Channel.

Second Scripps Island was another channel which we gave the name of Loranche Channel in honor of Lura B. Sereck who was given me much help in my work. South of the channel there is a group of islands which we called to call Finley Islands in honor of Dr. Finley, among other things, president of the American Geographical Society of New York.

Then we came to the most important discovery we had made. A wide level strait, parted the group of islands from an extensive area of land which we believed to be the Antarctic mainland. We named this Stefansson Strait.

NAMES HEARST LAND
It would have been difficult to distinguish between the ice in the strait and the mainland had it not been for a low ice cliff which was and fell of the tide.

We had no means of telling the thickness of the ice other than the strait or on the land. The cliff we judged to be not more than 10 to 35 feet high. The sun shone directly on it and from our height it was not possible to show it clearly on a photograph.

Southward and beyond the ice foot the snowy surface rose gradually until it was level in the pearl gray, hazy sky. We named this new section of the continent Hearst Land. Looking into this vast unbroken expanse we could see no more than a sea with eyes tightly closed and facing a strong incandescent light.

We could sense an opaque grayness lightly tinged with red, but not a speck of anything cast a shadow or relieved the surface.

We had left the mountains far behind and knew by doing so that we had made a real discovery. It was not merely the extension of an area already mapped of the new coast of Graham Land and the Weddell Sea. We had not only made a discovery which had broken down a century-old belief, but we had gone beyond that and discovered something new.

DISCOVERY IMPORTANT
We do not know as yet just how important that discovery may be. It is important from a geographical point of view, but it is also important from a scientific point of view. It shows that the continent of Antarctica is not a single land mass, but is composed of many islands and peninsulas separated by narrow channels, one strait, many bays, scores of mountains and more than a thousand miles of new coast line on the map.

It is important from a geological point of view because it shows that the Graham Land group of islands are an intrusion which separates the South American continent and the continent of Antarctica. It is important from a biological point of view because it shows that the continent of Antarctica is not a single land mass, but is composed of many islands and peninsulas separated by narrow channels, one strait, many bays, scores of mountains and more than a thousand miles of new coast line on the map.

HOOPER'S POLICY BROAD

Washington, March 13 (INS).—President Hoover's announced policy of strict conservation of government oil lands and reserves was amplified today in a conference with Senator Walsh (D) of Montana at the White House.

While determined to make no more leases other than those made mandatory by acts of Congress, President Hoover informed Senator Walsh that the policy would not apply to those now holding prospectors' drilling permits if it can be shown they already have made expenditures in the work.

There are about 50,000 such permits now outstanding.

Under existing law, prospectors may obtain drilling permits and then if they find oil they have a "moral claim" on the government.

President Hoover, it developed today, is willing to modify his announced policy to the extent that those prospectors who have already proceeded under the old policy may get preferred treatment in the matter of leases, but none other.

Man Shot 5 Times Dies in a Taxicab
New York, March 13 (INS).—A man, whose name was shown to a hospital, an unknown man, staggered into a taxicab early this morning and collapsed. Arriving at the hospital, the cab driver opened the door to find his fare dead from five bullet wounds. The name—Charles Devereaux—was found on an envelope in his clothes.

Devereaux, aged 32, was taken to the place where the cabman picked up his fare and followed a trail of blood to the scene of the shooting.

Virginia's Grand Old Lady of the Stage 84
Roanoke, Va., March 13 (AP).—Mrs. Blanche Whitfield, Virginia's grand old lady of the stage, celebrated her 84th birthday at her farm near Montvale. She played nearly 400 roles in the 60 years of her stage career. After establishing her reputation in London and Paris, she came to the United States in 1868 and toured the country in "H. M. S. Pinafore," "Hazel Kirke," "The Rajah," "May Blossom," "The Private Secretary" and other productions.

Mystery Death

Patricia Pemberton, blonde actress, known as "the girl with a million dollar smile," was found shot to death in a car in Los Angeles in what is believed was a suicide.

OLD SONG WINS HIS BRIDE

Hollywood, Cal., March 13 (AP).—After proving the truth of the almost forgotten song of other days, "Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder," George (Big Boy) Gillespie, singing cowboy of an Arizona "cider" ranch, and his wife, Katherine Thorne, Chicago belles, were together again today.

A two weeks' "love test" prescribed by the girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert J. Thorne, ended when the third daughter of the former president of the Montgomery Ward Company declared that "for two weeks I listened to my parents' arguments, but found that my love had increased during the separation."

There is nothing to add to the fact that my wife and I are very happy and expect to make our home here while I am completing a picture," commented the bridegroom as the couple settled down in their apartment and began real housekeeping.

GETS WARRANT FOR HUSBAND

Little Marjorie Rudy's mama hadn't disappeared at all, the mother told Judge Hayden today in Roxbury Court, where she asked for a non-support.

The story of her disappearance, according to the mother, was given out by the husband and father, although he later said from her home in Gerard at Roxbury.

The mother asserted also that Rudy refused to allow her to take little Marjorie, four years old, with her.

Judge Hayden told Mrs. Rudy her relief must be found in probate court. The mother replied she would go to that court and seek a legal separation and custody of Marjorie.

News of Byrd Party From Radio Farthest South

New York, March 13 (AP).—A message from the most southerly radio station in the world, the first sub-base to be established by Comdr. Byrd between his main camp and the South Pole, has been relayed to New York and received by the New York Times radio station.

It was addressed to Mrs. Hjordis Peterson of Chicago and sent by Carl Peterson, her husband, who is the radio operator.

with a dog sled party that carried provisions to the sub-base, about 70 miles south of Byrd's main base at Little America. It said: "Everything fine. Am traveling south on the dog team."

The message was intercepted first at Little America, relayed to the bank of New York, en route to Dundee, N. Z., which in turn relayed it to the Times. The entire process required but a few minutes.

Cascarets give you as much exercise as you get from an hour's hard play. They give you lasting relief from headaches, dizziness, constipation, indigestion, etc. Each time you use Cascarets, your bowels become stronger. Oils, salts and ordinary laxatives produce only mechanical or chemical action, which actually weakens the bowels.

CHAPTER 2

"HELLO, Dal!" a voice of deep register hailed as the girl approached the car. "I see Dan's being nice to you," she pursued in light malice, though the Penny boy with head under the hood could not hear—"taking you out for a spin."

"Shirley!" Dal cried in a breath, snatched off his cap, and scrambled down to the sidewalk. "Shirley! How thorn! I hardly knew you!"

"Oh!" the girl queried with entire calm—"didn't you? Why?"

"Why?" he stammered. "I don't know exactly. You've changed a lot—"

"Have I? I don't see how."

"Well, I've been away all winter, you know," Dal reminded her, not entirely with out signs of irritation—"away at school."

"Shirley laughed. 'I didn't even know you'd been away. But now you're back'—she made a momentary pause, with a parting smile in protest—"come around and see me some night."

When Dal got home he found that both father and mother were off at a funeral. A note from Streeter restricted him to his room under lock and key and the boy commanding Toby to turn the key gave way to sobs and then realized that he hated his father. He felt that his father hated him, too.

The old clock was sounding six when he woke from an unremitted nap and decided to escape via the window.

Once at liberty he made his way to the Hawthorne resi- dence and saw the girl of the morning a lissome figure by the big iron gates.

"Hello, Dal!"

"Nice night, isn't it?"

"Lovely."

"Shirley," he heard himself saying, and at the same time noticed that he had placed a hand on the gate to spring it open—"mind if I come in for a while, Shirley?"

"Why, no, Dal!" Shirley said quickly—"I mean, I wouldn't mind, only you can't."

He stupidly repeated.

"I mean"—she had an un- easy laugh—"it wouldn't be any use tonight. Chester Put- tles. Turn to Page 15, Column 1."

THE CURIOUS QUIZZER

Every day he asks a question and pictures those questioned.

THE QUESTION

Do you know former Mayor Cur- ry's proposition to take the Museum of Natural History to make room for a convention hall?

MILDRED HAMILIN, 378 Granite st., Quincy, clerk—Yes, I think that one of the greatest aids to the city will be the building of a convention hall.

A building of this nature in- sort would bring to Boston many of the large conventions that up till now have been held in other parts of the country.

The business, money and publicity that Boston would receive from these conventions would far outweigh any value that the Museum of Natural History has.

ALICE WHITE, 42 First st., Brockton, stenographer—I think that Mr. Curry has the right idea.

It seems to me that Boston is becoming antique looking and it has too many an- tiques in it. There are plenty of other museums in and around Boston where natural history stu- dents and professors may go for informa- tion on this subject.

A convention hall would put new life and new blood in the city and take the city out of the rut it is now following.

JOHN J. CONNORS, 41 Fal- mouth st., Boston, mathematician—The Natural History Museum contains a great many valuable exhibits and as time goes on they will become even more valuable than they are now. Boston has always been regar- ded as being one of the greatest of edu- cational centers and if we start to tear down any of the places that are adding this work the city will soon lose that reputation. I think it would be a great mistake to raze this building.

EARL WAKELIN, Dover, teacher—There is no doubt that a convention hall would be a great asset to Boston but must it be built at the sacrifice of the Natural History Museum? There are a great many other places in the city that would make good sites for a con- vention hall. Let us tear down buildings that are of no use to the city but not those that are among our great points of interest. I don't think that a convention hall could make up the loss that would be felt if the Museum of Natural History were torn down.

OATMAN IN BAD SHAPE FOR GAME

Springfield Six Battling to Land Third Place in Can.-Am. Race

Boston Tigers will resume their campaign to secure first place in the Canadian-American League when they meet the Springfield Indians in the Arena at 8:30 tomorrow night. The game will be crucial for the Springfield point of view, for the Indians are in the middle of a battle with New Haven for the third playoff position.

Consequently a large number of fans from the Home City will come to Boston for the game.

OATMAN HURT
The Tigers probably will have to play without Capt. Eddie Oatman of the defense who tore a muscle in his chest in the game with New Haven Sunday night.

Ludger Denmarck, the First Constant probably will start at the point with Reg Mackey. Otherwise the Tigers are in too condition and anxious to see up beyond the shadow of a doubt, the league championship.

TIGERS WANT TOP
First place will give them a bye, while Providence and other Springfield or New Haven battlers each other in the semifinal series.

Moreover, it would assure the club of either the first or second place out in the playoff receipts.

Tigers had another big practice session today. Sid Silberberg, Boston University goal tender, worked out in the nets and looked good.

DUFFY TEACHES EAGLES FORM OF HITTING
Hush Duffy, one of the best instructors on batting now coaching college baseball, is spending a lot of time teaching the rookies the art. Although the B. C. ball tossers don't hit them in the Army, they'll have the stance and swing when they get outdoors.

When the boys get through their drills, Hush Duffy has had half a dozen of them line up against the green background.

These McGinnis, the freshman mentor, goes through the pitching motions while the batters stand at the plate. In the meantime McGinnis is sipping back and forth, noting the swing of each individual and correcting any faults that are noticeable. Every man on the B. C. squad takes a dozen or so of these practice swings before going to the showers and calling a day.

It is Duffy's opinion that a batter doesn't have to have literally good eyesight to turn into a 400 hitter in college. He stands at the plate right, circles his bat evenly and holds the willow correctly. He'll be almost sure of connecting for frequent base knocks.

WALTER JOHNSON (HOLDING BALL).

Walter, one of the best pitchers of all time and now manager of the Washington Senators, is shown in the above Associated Press photo as he instructs his charges in a few tricks of the trade. Walter should knock the inside stuff.

B. J. J. MAY GET OUTDOORS ON FRIDAY

Boston University baseball squad will work out at the new diamond at Newkirk Field in Weston Friday if the weather continues to be new, as it has been for the past few days.

The new field is still soggy and will need at least two more days of mid weather before it will be firm enough to use for baseball. Otherwise Coach Moore would have had the squad out before for batting practice.

The Pioneers have only three weeks in which to prepare for the opening game of the season with Harvard at Cambridge, April 6, and unless the squad can get outside shortly the boys are apt to find themselves up against it when they take the field against the Crimson.

The call for all new men is in and 59 candidates reported. The largest number ever to report in the history of the sport at Boston University.

It has not as yet been definitely decided that the B. U. ball tossers are to be numbered this spring. It is the number of the players in the squad who have the home field and have been forced to play all their games on the road. Evidently the numbering of the players is to acquaint the B. U. roster with their diamond representatives who will play before a home audience for the first time.

AT STATE PARLORS

John Mills of Medford sprang a surprise in the New England pool championship now being run at the State Parlor Club when he defeated Young Irish in the West End, 100 to 77.

Irish was an odds on favorite but the remarkable playing of the Junior champion offset any odds Irish may have had previous to tonight.

Tonight Brooks Carpenter of Somerville will play George Gould of Roxbury. Carpenter is now in second place in the standing and playing the best pool of any of the contestants. If he wins tonight he will be the favorite to win the title.

PAUL HOPKINS

Hopkins should make the ball jump. (Associated Press photo.) He is at the Tampa, Fla., training camp of the Senators. Paul certainly puts everything into the pitch.

Passing the Puck

If the Bruins are allowed to go out in the playoffs and play the brand of hockey they displayed against the Hawks, there is not a team in the business that can stop them.

It was evident from the start of the game that the Bruins were out to put an end to the battle for first place.

They went into the Hawks from the opening faceoff.

traveling at top speed from start to finish and was in many plays which should have been converted into goals.

Since the first of the month the Hawks have been surprising the followers of N. H. L. hockey. They just about ruined the Maroons by scoring a 2-0-0 defeat on the Montreal outfit and then they beat the New York Rangers to a scoreless tie.

The Bruins turned in the best exhibition they have ever displayed. They went after the Hawks from the opening faceoff and they never let up until the final whistle.

Lloyd Klein came into his own against the Hawks. He was let out by the Bruins at midseason, but after a month with Duluth he returned and is now ready to step in and do his stuff.

Myles Lane, the former Dartmouth all-around athlete, was given a chance to display his wares and he made a decided hit with the fans.

One would think that the Bruins were playing Canadians in the first round of the playoffs, judging from the crowd which was on hand for this game. If the Bruins are capable of displaying the same brand of hockey against the Flying Frenchmen, they are going to go far in the coming series.

Tiny Thompson, who was taken up from Minnesota in the trial by the Bruins last fall, has established himself as a bona fide goal scorer by the Hawks who scored into the nets by the Bruins. He admits that the reason by Cature was converted into a goal when he stuck out his stick.

AL SCHACHT—NICK ALTROCK

Nick and Al are the famous funmakers of the Senators. This Associated Press photo shows them working on a new laugh stunt for the coming campaign. They are a great pair.

'THE ROAD TO ENDOR'; A THRILLING SIX-DAY NOVEL

the unhappy youngster told by fate and starts behind the woodshed, when this labor palled aside away across the upland meadows for moody rambles in the lonesome back-country.

If only he could have five minutes' talk with Shirley, the riddle of that phantom figure on the cliff assailing his father, might be answered.

What if Shirley should refuse to see him when he put himself in her way? He would never dare to call. Her parents would not permit her exposure to such contaminating company.

Stuck at heart the boy wandered out on the Barrens and communed with himself.

By chance in one of his wanderings he stumbled on a picnic party largely attended, by one of his friends who had now blotted him off the calendar. And suddenly he was aware that Chet Putnam had a compelling arm about Shirley Hawthorne whose prayers for money came through at last: "Don't Chet, please! I don't want you to—"

"I haven't!" the girl pantedly protested. "I never meant—I didn't know you meant—I don't care, I don't want you to kiss me."

"Yes, you do," Chet insisted. "You just think you ought to be like this, just because—" quest demonstrated. Chet had managed to smear his lips down the girl's cheek. Shirley cried out in resentment, redoubling her efforts to break away. "You beast! You beast!" Simultaneously, he, beside himself, wrenched Chet's arm from round the girl and planting the heel of a hand on his chest sent him reeling.

"That'll be about all from you," he announced, stepping between the two with a formidable scowl. "Cut it out now, unless you're dying to get hurt."

"Young Mr. Putnam caught himself up, rattled and came back with a rush, which, however, stopped short of Dal's unyielding stand. "Mind your own business!" he stormed in indignation that knew no bounds but those imposed by Dal's reputation as a "scrapper."

"I and your own affairs, I guess I and Shirley know what we're doing. I guess we can manage without any interference from you!"

A look from Dal and Chet died. "Oh, Dal!" Shirley tremulously cried—"how wonderful of you!"

"He didn't hurt you, Shirley?"

"Oh, no! not the least little bit!"

"Only," Shirley said, shaking her head in vast astonishment—"I hate him. Chet's so terribly conceited. Anyhow—"

"He fired a lighted on Dal, drawing him to her as if nothing had happened."

"I don't like him. He's just—just a puppy. Dal!" The face lit up to his was suffused with a tenderness the boy dared not take to his credit. "Dal! don't you know—nobody can kiss me without my consent except—you."

"Shirley!" Dal faltered, "you don't mean it; you don't know what you're saying."

Amazingly she gave him a slow nod of contradiction. Her eyes, some the less constant to his. "Yes, Dal," she said, or rather breathed through lips tremulous—"Yes, Dal—I do."

"But—how can you mean it?—when you know all about me?"

"—that's what I mean," Dal—wisdom of the ages issuing from the mouth of a mere baby—"when you're in love."

"You don't mean," the boy stammered—"Shirley, you can't understand love?"

"Oh, Dal!" the wag of her head reproached allowance—"her eyes made perfect sense to him, cool and calm. His heart winged to heaven on her lips."

After that they met by stealth. They had to—they dared not tell another soul their splendid secret, were both too young to think of marriage, to dream of love, to be engaged.

In sequence he had a long talk with Pentecost, then a shorter with his father. To his complete amazement Streator fell in with his plans: Dal proposed to serve Pentecost as chauffeur and errand boy through the summer and under his guidance prepare to enter a medical school in the autumn. "Anything," Streator agreed, "as long as you cease to be an idiot."

Pentecost taught the boy to drive and how to look after a car. His rare duties, though they kept him tolerably busy, let him free to see Shirley at least once a day. Thus their love prospered. Dal grew accustomed to waiting in a spot remote from the home of either and seeing with a willing of emotion that never failed, Shirley suddenly rising to meet him, cool and calm enough to look at in her cheeks of
